HEI KORANDUM

SUBJECT: The Korean Situation was a second of second of the line of the second of the

I. Military Situation.

Northern Korean forces in the Pyongtack-Ansong area are contiming to exert heavy pressure in their advance beyond Chonan. Except for a Northern advance into Chungju, the front line further to the east has remained relatively stable.

The Northern advance in the Chonan area has trapped one battalion of the US 24th Division and has forced the retreat of another US battalion south to Kongju. The best remaining Southern force, the Capital Division, is heavily engaged in the Chinchon area, and late US press reports from the front claim that other Southern troops, in battle near-Chungju, have inflicted heavy casualties on Northern forces. Heavyhile, a Southern regiment has moved north from Pusan and is in contact with the enemy at Yongdok on the east coast.

No air action by Northern forces was reported during the past 24 hours. Strikes by USAF planes knocked out 2 bridge spans at Samchok and hits were reported on a bridge at Yongdok. Naval bombardment by US and UK units has cut the east coest road couth of Samchok.

II. Political Stability.

A Commist broadcast from Seoul has announced the membership of the "Seoul People's Committee," an organization which is undoubtedly destined to be the Northern regime's device for giving a legitimate fecade to Northern decrees and demands for all-Korean "unity." With the exception of the Chairman, this committee is made up of Southern Koreans of varying degrees of prominence (most important is Kim Kiu Sik, formerly Chairman of the interim Legislative Assembly during the US military occupation), and also includes various public officials and Assemblymen whom the Republican Covernment had imprisoned as Communists.

Although no new developments have been reported in the past 24 hours in the field of guerrilla activities, CHCFE (Commender-in-Chief For East) believes that the pattern of Northern Korean concentrations along the east coast represents the possible assembly of guerrillas who have staged uprisings following Northern successes elsewhere. CHCFE also reports, without evaluation, that there are indications of popular unrest north of the 38th Parallel, particularly in the Hambung area. The existence of organized anti-Communist groups in Hambung had been reported periodically for more than a year before the outbreak of hostilities.
